Biographical Note

Keith Baldwin was born May 25, 1928 in Buffalo, New York, later moving with his family to Michigan and residing in Lansing in 1937. He graduated from Eastern High School in Lansing in 1946 and Michigan State University in 1950, later earning a Master's degree in Physics (1955) from University of Maine-Orono. Baldwin served in the U.S. Military, teaching at Officer Signals School, as well as training new recruits during the Korean War. Baldwin started his professional career at Raytheon Research Lab in Maine, but left the industry in 1963 to pursue a career in teaching at the Michigan College of Mining and Technology in Houghton, Michigan. There he worked as an associate professor in physics and became involved with the Keweenaw Research Center (KRC) where he worked on vehicle research and testing. Baldwin retired from teaching in 1984 and created his own company, KMB/Tech, which partnered with the university.
