Historical note

"The Diapason," founded in 1909, is an international journal devoted to the organ, the harpsichord, the carillon, and church music. It regularly includes feature articles, reviews, reports, news, organ specifications, and a calendar, as well as classified advertisements. Directed to a diverse reading audience, articles range from technical and scholarly ones to those of more general interest. Emphasis is given to material dealing with all aspects of the pipe organ (<http://www.sgcpubs.com/dp/>; accessed August 2012).

Collection Scope and Content Summary

"The Diapason," an international magazine devoted to the organ, the harpsichord, the carillon, and church music. Contents include two issues featuring articles by Janet Anuta Dalquist. The February 2007 issue includes the article, "Pipe Organs of the Keweenaw Houghton County, Michigan," which provides a detailed catalog of pipe organs in Keweenaw and Houghton Counties. The May 2012 issue features "An Update on the Organs of the Keweenaw," details the restoration work on the A. B. Felgemaker organ which was built in 1882 for a Lutheran church in Wisconsin before making its way to Michigan's Keweenaw Peninsula.
