Historical Note

---

Materials in the Michigan Technological University Student Photography Collection were created in part by students in the university's forestry program during the mid-1990s, although subjects pertaining to forestry figure into the collection only tangentially. As a result, it seems likely that these materials originated in a student project or from a course designed to broaden the scope of undergraduate education at Michigan Tech.

---

Collection Scope and Content Summary

---

Collection, circa 1995, of photographs taken by students at Michigan Technological University of individuals, objects, and local places. The images--twelve in number--are all black-and-white prints; some are framed. The identities of individuals pictured in the photographs and the settings of many images are unknown, but others feature recognizable places, such as buildings on the Michigan Tech campus.
