Research Interests:

Ceramic processing, characterization and behavior, shock deformation including microstructural effects and dynamic fracture of ceramics and metals, shock waves, wave propagation, impact phenomena, computational modeling and simulation, hydrocodes, explosive-metal interaction, fragmentation.

Teaching Interests:

Prior to Fall Quarter 1993 I either regularly taught or taught every several years the following courses. However, as coordinator, I chose to teach Dynamics at least once a year and did so from 1980-1993.

Undergraduate: Statics, Dynamics, Mechanics of Materials, Fluid Mechanics, Vibrations, Intermediate Mechanics of Materials (senior level), Dynamics II (senior level). Developed and taught a video-taped Dynamics course to students at General Motors, GM Technical Center, Warren, MI, Fall Quarter 1992, Winter Quarter, 1991-1992. Introduced design projects into Statics in 1990

Graduate: Wave Propagation in Continuous Media, Continuum Mechanics I & II, Theory of Elasticity, Advanced Mechanics of Materials

Educational Development and Research:

- Co-led the effort to start the distance learning Design Engineering Certificate program with General Motors in 2000. This certificate was designed initially for General Motors' employees but was later opened up to other suppliers and other companies. It is a twenty five (25) credit certificate which includes two courses from two other universities. Its focus is to add a math modeling ability to traditional designers. At its peak, there were over six hundred (600) General Motors employees enrolled in the certificate program.
- Led the effort to start a distance learning Ph.D. degree in Mechanical Engineering – Engineering Mechanics, Michigan Tech, in 1995 with initial partner Ford Motor Company. Today this degree program has been and continues to be utilized by employees from other companies, government labs or agencies, NGO's, and other research organizations.
- Part of a team (Bruce Barna, Alex Mayer, Bruce Rafert, and William Predebon) that initiated a distance learning Ph.D. degree with the University of Sonora, Hermosillo, Mexico, in 2003.
- Co-initiated, with Bruce Rafert, a distance learning BSE with a Product Design minor with Northwestern Michigan College, Traverse City, MI, in 2003. Initiated discussions with Delphi Community College and Henry ford Community College in the fall 2004 concerning a possible BSE program.
- Led the effort to start a distance learning Global Master of Science research degree in Mechanical Engineering at Michigan Tech in 1998, partnering initially with Bradford University in England and Ford Motor Company in Europe and the U. S. This took a year of planning involving compromises between the European and U.S. Research master's degree. A coursework only distance learning master of science degree, called "Signature", was also started in 2003 with Ford Motor Company. Today both degree programs have been and continue to be utilized by employees from other companies, government labs or agencies, NGO's, and other research organizations.
- Co-developer with Peck Cho of the Undergraduate Student Coaches Training program for the ME-EM Engineering Learning Center during the academic year, 1997, 1996 and 1995.
- Co-developer with Peck Cho of ME-EM Teaching Assistant (TA) Training Program during Fall Quarters, 1996 and 1995.
- Co-developer with Peck Cho, Marilyn M. Cooper, Pushpalatha P. Murthy of the MTU New Faculty Orientation and Yearly Seminar Series with Emphasis on Teaching, 1996; with Peck Cho, Diana George, Linda Ott and Philip Sweany, 1995.
- Organizer and Coordinator of the ME-EM Engineering Learning Center (ELC), 1990-1997. The Center provides walk-in and by-appointment help for students in Statics, Dynamics, Mechanics of Materials and Thermodynamics with problem-solving skills, understanding concepts and lecture material, and with difficulties in homework problems and exams. These courses are the first real engineering classes and are gateway courses to the later junior- and senior-level courses in engineering design and analysis. It is staffed with carefully selected undergraduate students and graduate students. The ELC continues today as a viable learning center for our students and is the heart of the ME-EM Student Success Center.

- Coordinator/Advisor of Self-Paced Programmed Courses, Statics, Dynamics, and Mechanics of Materials, 1977-1990. Responsible for the development of the new Michigan Technological University Learning Resource Center for Self-Paced Programmed Instruction, 1981. Chairman, three year trial study of Self-Paced Programmed Instruction (SPPI) at MTU which resulted in an acceptable method of handling the SPPI versions of Statics, Dynamics, and Mechanics of Materials through the Learning Resource Center, 1977-1979.
