Question 5

Conflicts of Interest / Export Control

Conflict of Interest: Conflict of interest training must be completed by investigators who are new to Michigan Technological University and repeated at least every four years or whenever University policies or procedures are modified or updated. This course outlines Michigan Tech's policy on financial conflict of interest and provides guidance regarding the investigator's responsibility for disclosure of financial conflicts. Investigators receiving research funding from NIH and other granting agencies affiliated with the Public Health Service (PHS) must complete this Conflict of Interest course before starting their research.

Export Controls: This course provides additional information beyond the basic introduction to export controls offered in the REC courses. Export controls govern the distribution of materials, information and technology to countries or citizens of foreign countries, including international students. These regulations apply to research and other university activities regardless of the source of funding.
